

Dear colleagues,

what a sad news just before Christmas time. Certainly, Vjacheslav was not only a very close friend of mine and an important personality for Russian philosophy but also an influential philosopher of science and technology on the international level. I deeply mourn with you and all my Russian philosophy friends. - Do you know details of his demise? Was it a heart or brain stroke? When I met him still two years ago or so, he seemed to be healthy and fit. -

We all will not forget him and his always friendly smile and amiable conduct. May he rest in peace.

If there will be another article of mine in Russian soon I shall dedicate it to his memory.

With sad and cordial greetings
